George Niblo and Helen Spencer are the stars. Others in the cast are Johnny O'Donnell, Ralph Rockaway. Mabelle Blake, Anna O'Donnell, Joe Mack and Billy Wainwright, with a chorus of twenty beauties assisting.

Next week at the Strand will be marked by the presentation of another well-balanced and amusing program of vaudeville and photodrama. The vaudeville headliner is the Royal Harmony Five, who present a musical number. Wilson and company share honors with the foregoing, offering a clever comedy playlet en-titled "Miss Thanksgiving." The Esther Trio in an acrobatic and gymnastic novelty; La Rose and Adams, a breezy pair from musical comedy; together with Hawthorne and Cook in complete this part of the presentation. Olive Thomas, who has appeared on the silver sheet as "flapper," "baby vamp," and sophisticated lady of fashion, has one of the most delightful roles of her career in "Darling Mine," the story of a winsome lass who wouldn't be bad and couldn't be good. The story is from the pen of John Lynch and Laurence Trimble and has been directed by Mr. Trimble with a supporting cast that in-cludes Walter McGrail. Miss Thomas, in "Darling Mine," of a girl from "the ould sod," who comes to New York with her mascot goat and flits through the theatrical world radiating romance, kindness, and old world philosophy. The auxiliary feature for next week will be "The Stage Hand," in which the amusing central character is impersonated by Larry Semon.

CRANDALL'S.

For the remainder of the week the thief feature of the photoplay bill through Saturday, will be one of the most impressive film plays of the year under the title "Frivolous Wives." The story is one of power and interest, interpreted by a stellar cast. As an added attraction will be shown "Good Night Nurse," one of Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle's comodies. A super-feature will be shown Sunday at 3, when one of the world's famous figures will make his initial appearance in Washington as a star of silent drama.
